

I would like to comment on the FCC proposing to expand LPFM service in a way that would allow a new LPFM station to take priority over a current FM translator service. I want you to know that I find much value in K-LOVE, a national/regional service. The thought of a city or region losing this service is extremely disheartening considering the encouragement it offers the community.

Here are my personal comments for opposing this proposal:

- As a resident, K-LOVE serves me by providing daily encouragement that I can find no other place on the radio. I believe this so much that I financially support this service every month.

- The effect of losing this service in a community that K-LOVE is broadcasting would be extreme for those who rely on it everyday just like I do. I would feel lost without the support it gives me. What could possibly take its place when some many other broadcasting stations have little to nothing positive to share?

- I believe the service provided by K-LOVE is in the public interest because it supports the family. We need all we can in this country that backs the family when the family institution is crumbling all around us.
